Kingdom of Equitaine

A green and bountiful land in western Vetia, Equitaine is a mysterious realm of misted vales, enchanted lakes, and many strange creatures. But most of all, it's the home of a mighty human kingdom answering a great monarch, fine lords, and a single goddess above all. Following an ancient code of chivalry, the nobility of this land has honed an equestrian heritage surpassing any other. Equitaine's armies boast ranks of warrior-knights, clad in colourful panoply, bristling with armaments and trained in a ferocious martial tradition. Renowned across the world – for it often campaigns in other lands – when this tide of valiant cavalry begins its charge, there is almost nothing that can stand in its way.

The mystical lands of Equitaine are home to many wild and wonderful beings. From misted hills, holy lakes and mountainous crags, the knights of this realm sally forth upon their Lady's quests, taking them across Vetia, Taphria and beyond sometimes in fleeting crusades, other times establishing lasting colonies.

History

Equitaine was founded by the despised vampire-king Gilles de Raux, who united the many chiefdoms and was able to hold off the armies of the Vermin Empire that conquered every other land. The kingdom was finally liberated by the legendary Uther, its first mortal king and one of the human leaders who joined with Sunna to establish humanity's ascendance at the start of the Ninth Age. Uther's own companions with whom he fought the undead Everking (including)Roland, Percival and Tristan) are themselves heroic legends, considered the founders of the knightly virtues, feudal structures, and heroic traditions that endure to this day.

The Chivalric Code

The Kingdom is strictly feudal, codified by three castes: those who fight, those who toil, and those who pray – also known as the lords, the lowborn, and the clergy. These roughly correspond to the primary religious virtues of courage, ordeal, and honesty. Those who transgress or seek to escape this system become outlaws, no longer under the king's protection. While lowborn milites, ordo warriors, and outlaw irregulars act as support for many armies, the professional military is primarily composed of noble-born knights. These highly skilled combatants and expert horsemen are sworn to a martial and ethical code of conduct sometimes condensed to seven guiding principles (although an exact list has never been agreed).

The Lady

Most Equitans worship a single goddess simply called the Lady, an embodiment of virtue and the sole source of redemption for Her faithful. Also known as the Queen of Cups, the Evermaiden and many other titles, Her followers have great respect for nature, particularly fresh water. They also regularly call for holy wars in Her name, ostensibly to gain control of sites of spiritual importance or to bring the Lady's comfort to foreign lands. Religious institutions called ordos - are home to both clerics and scholars, of which some members learn to fight in order to protect their estates. Above these are the Damsels: female sorcerers and prophetesses said to share a special connection with the deity, whose instructions are followed by lord and peasant alike. It surprises many to find there is a second god in Equitan lore, the Lady's counterpart:

a trickster figure of many names (Karde, Cyr, Cunning Cul...), followed only by those on the darkest fringes of society.

Mounts

Named for its widely acclaimed steeds, the Kingdom's greatest passion among all classes is its horses. Many varieties have been reared by master breeders, each suited to unique roles in peace and war. Other creatures are skillfully raised as well, from familiar domestic animals to stranger beasts and chimeric beings, which are common in the wilder parts of the Realm. Those that are part-horse are particularly prized, including hippogriffs and pegasi.

Sainted and the Quest

Any Equitan can choose to take up the Quest: a path of pure devotion to the Lady. It can take many forms suited to the individual's abilities, but is always difficult and dangerous. Supplicants must place themselves between those in need and all the evils of the world. They must embody the three virtues without reservation, giving up all privileges and inheritance, no matter how mean or great. Blessed with visions, they are compelled to travel great leagues. The more they strive, the more they suffer; the more they overcome peril, the closer they come to the Goddess, gradually gaining Her favours as they do so. Those who prove their worth become increasingly powerful and enriched by holy magic, until they have struggled and endured enough to be worthy of Her and drink from Her chalice. Renewed and blessed with long life, they become Her Sainted and the greatest champions of the land. Revered by all, they stand apart from politics and society but continue to serve the Evermaiden and aid Her people.

Fey

Equitaine is often visited - and sometimes inhabited - by the Lady's supernal servants. These otherworldly beings take many forms and are not always kind or reliable but many lords will welcome them and treat them as allies. All manner of nymphs, faeries, sprites, and even stranger beasts are known in the Kingdom, in addition to the Goddess' closer companions. The Fair Folk can greatly empower the realm in battle, if they choose to attend.

Army Specific Rules

Orisons

During Pre-game Selections, a Kingdom of Equitaine army creates a pool of Blessing Tokens: one for each unit in your Army List with Holy Vows. There can never be more than 6 tokens in the pool. Blessing Tokens can be used in each Magic Phase, at any time before 'Casting Spells' (Magic Phase, 5): discard a Token, choose a friendly unit anywhere on the battlefield, and grant one of the following Model Rules. All those effects have Duration: One Turn.

- Orison of Discipline: Discipline set to 9.
- Orison of Shielding: Aegis (5+).
- Orison of Striking: +2 Off, Magical Attacks, and ignore Parry. Model parts with Mount are not affected.

No model can be affected by more than one of the above effects simultaneously unless specifically stated. Applying an Orison to a model cancels any Orisons previously applied to it, unless specifically stated that it can be affected by them simultaneously.

The Blessing

Unit profiles in this Army Book contain an additional Characteristic: 'Aegis (Aeg)'. This gives the unit the model rule Aegis (X+), where 'X' is the Aeg value.

Remember that lack of an Aeg value does not prevent a unit from being affected by Aegis modifiers.

The land and people of Equitaine are steeped in magic and faith. The best maille has prayers stamped on every ring, oaken shields are inscribed with hymns of battle, and arms are anointed in the Lady's service. Adepts of the ordos consecrate the small folk and highborn alike before battle. Orisons, daily hymns, devotions, quests, religious sacrifices, fasting, and a score of other efforts come together to create the Blessing: not a single working of spellcraft, but rather the emergent consequence of all together.

Army Model Rules

Clergy

The model gains Aegis (5+, against Magical Attacks).

Commonfolk

The model gains Aegis (5+) while Engaged in the same Combined Combat as another friendly unit.

Knight Banneret

Rarity: Uncommon.

A unit containing a Knight Banneret adds +1 to the Combat Score of its side.

In addition, it can take a single Banner Enchantment from the list of Army Specific Magic Items.

Lance Formation

A unit entirely with Lance Formation only needs to have three files to form Proper Ranks.

However, the unit is never considered to have more than one Proper Rank for the purpose of Rank Bonus. Moreover, when in a unit that has exactly three files, each model part on a model with Lance Formation gains two instances of Fight in Extra Rank.

Mimicking the famous weapons they use, Equitaine's knights often form a spear-like shape on the charge, the better to drive through opposing lines. With the momentum of their great steeds, this tactic has proven so effective that it has become the kingdom's signature approach.

Nobility

The model gains Aegis (5+, against no Armour Save*).

*This Aegis save can only be used against attacks where the model cannot take an Armour Save, or would automatically fail it.

Ordo Minister

Anytime during a friendly Magic Phase, before 'Casting Spells' (Magic Phase, 5), each unit containing Ordo Minister may gain one of the following effects:

- Raise 1 HP on a Rank-and-File Health Pool in the unit.
- Discard 1 Blessing Token and Recover 1 HP on any model in the unit.

Prepared Position

Rarity: Uncommon.

When Deploying the unit, you may place a Wall fully within 1" of the unit's Front Facing, and not in contact with any other Terrain Features.

This Wall cannot be wider than 1", nor longer than 8".

It follows the normal rules for Walls, with the exception that it is Covering Terrain (Height 1) instead of Height 3.

Sainted

Rarity: Legendary.

Cannot be taken by the Battle Standard Bearer.

The model part gains +1 Att, and the model gains Fearless.

The model is always considered to be under the effect of all Orisons at the same time (*i.e. Discipline set to 9, +2 Off, Aegis (5+), Magical Attacks, ignore Parry).

This does not prevent the model's unit from being the target of an Orison, although the model itself does not benefit from this additional Orison.

Character Mounts

The finest and strongest horses, those bred and trained specifically for war, are called destriers, and nowhere are they found in such numbers and such quality as in Equitaine. The pride of knights and lords alike, these noble beasts are in large part responsible for the kingdom's military strength.

Equitaine is home to many strange creatures; some are suitable for riding even if they're not large enough to become knightly mounts. Perytons – part eagle, part deer – are particularly prized for their agility, among other winged combinations. Such animals are often depicted on coats of arms: valiant symbols of the Realm, descending upon enemies in a mighty storm.

While all horses are beloved by Equitans, the legendary unicorn is the only steed subject to outright worship. Intelligent beings able to cross the Veil at will, they rarely appear to mortals and only accept the Lady's closest servants as riders. These mounts are prized above all others in Equitaine, and with good reason. Among all the peoples of the world, only the Equitans have learned the secrets of breeding pegasi in captivity. The largest of the mortal mounts commonly used by Equitans in battle, hippogriffs are ferocious beasts combining the front half of an eagle and the back half of a horse. The mythic horses that dwell in the Lady's Realm are seen in the material world only when ridden by the supernal entourage of the Evermaiden. The pride of Equitaine are its knights. Heavily armed and armoured, these first sons of the nobility are the prime focus and greatest asset in any lord's military. Their mighty warhorses are the product of centuries of equestrian tradition, ensuring that Equitaine can count on better access to heavy cavalry than any other land.

Part of the obligation laid upon the lower orders of Equitaine is some form of service to a local lord. Usually this is paid in labour, but in time of war, they may be brought to battle to support the lord's knights, fight on foot, and fulfil the menial duties of which all armies are in need.
