Saurian Ancients

Reptiles who walk like humans but think like cold alien beings, hidden in remote regions, cultivating a secret global civilisation with ancient technologies and primordial monsters, ever watchful, rarely seen; the Saurian Ancients are the most inscrutable and mysterious of the world's great powers. Humanoid lizards, some can grow to hulking size, and from their secluded enclaves they judge the younger species according to strange, fanatical philosophies. Few understand why these beings behave the way they do, bringing aid and resources one year and terrible bloodshed the next. What is known for sure is that when a full saurian army is assembled, it strikes with terrible effect and little mercy.

Since the destruction of the Dawn Age empire, saurians have largely tried to stay hidden, only emerging to further the aims of their mysterious philosophy. They dwell in secret enclaves, which can be located wherever the temperature is warm enough to support cold-blooded metabolism.

Enclaves and Collaboration

The First Age, the Dawn Age, was ruled by reptiles: an empire of anurarch wizard-kings that ended with the titanic impact of a celestial object and the subsequent rebellion of the other species who'd been their slaves. In this Cataclysm, the anurarchs were exterminated, and their surviving saurian siblings fled into hiding, where they have remained ever since. Dispersed in remote and inaccessible secret settlements around the world, saurians have lived in isolated enclaves for millennia. Then, with the start of the Ninth Age, anurarchs once more began to hatch following the magical maelstrom of the Inferno event. Perhaps the largest and most powerful enclave is the one occupying the stormy tropical island of Atua, which learned from the anurarchs the secret of the ancient stepping portals. Atuan saurians began to reach out, sending forth envoys to make contact with other enclaves and reactivate whatever portals they could find. In this way began the Collaboration, a global network of saurian enclaves operating according to a single purpose, able to travel vast distances in secrecy.

Philosophy

Saurian minds are foreign and unfamiliar to warmblooded peoples. Saurians exhibit no interest in fundamental cultural concepts such as honour, duty, or symbols like flags and crowns. They have no rulers and worship no deities. Instead, they're linked to each other by a rudimentary empathic bond that can look like telepathy to outsiders. They seem to communicate wordlessly, perfectly synchronising their actions in eerie silence without any spoken orders, battlecries or beaten drums – and their reptilian nature makes them less susceptible to fits of emotion. To the extent that it can be understood by outsiders, the philosophy embraced by saurian enclaves which have joined the Collaboration is called Vitalism, sometimes symbolised by the spiral of the koru fern. Vitalists believe that entropy – the decline and decay of all things – is the great enemy of the universe, and that life, as a miraculous form of self-replication, must therefore be protected and nurtured above all else. Seeing themselves as gardeners or custodians of the cosmos, saurians fervently seek to enact the greater good as they understand it – though their interpretations of Vitalist morality can seem bizarre, unpredictable and sometimes contradictory to others.

Saurian Castes

Saurians live in many kinds of terrain, in any sufficiently warm location, and they're adapted to move effortlessly in water. They're a single species with four branches: separate biological castes or phenotypes. Smallest are the spritely skinks; together with their tegu sisters, who often reach seven feet tall, these two castes comprise at least 90% of the saurian population. Most of the rest are caimans: even larger crocodilians the size of an ogre. Often solitary, except when called together by their enclaves, caimans pursue strange interests that range from artistic to martial. The last caste is that of the anurarchs: long-lived creatures that misleadingly appear like oversized amphibians. Physically weak and defenceless, anurarchs have a prodigious capacity for learning magic. But due to their role as cruel tyrants in the Dawn Age, and their continued disinterest in morality, they've never been trusted by other saurians, who take measures to ensure they cannot seize power once more.

Technology

Saurians have always kept themselves apart from other species and have never learned their crafts. Even simple technologies like ironworking have passed the saurians by, and their Vitalist mission teaches them to hate open fire, which reduces complex material to simple ash – the ultimate form of entropy. Instead of these practices, saurians are known to use half-understood technologies from their ancient past, including special uses of certain stones and crystals. Lodestones, in particular, can be magically enhanced to produce many useful effects for saurian enclaves. Other, more complicated relics have been preserved in their entirety from the Dawn Age, and are still deployed by saurian armies when needed.

Magna Sauria

Saurians have a natural affinity with all reptiles, even the non-sapient. They have learned to domesticate many such species, but by far the most spectacular are the giant reptilians known as Magna Sauria. These brutes are found in the wild only in the great untamed continent of Virentia, where at least one of the Collaboration enclaves is based. From here, the Magna Sauria can be sent to join other enclaves around the world, where they are kept carefully hidden until they are needed. They range from smaller raptors and pachykraniums to hulking taurosaur, thyroscutia and perhaps the largest land-based creatures in the world, the titanopods.

Army Model Rules

Chameleon

The model gains Ambush (Battlefield Edge), Hard Target (1), and Scout.

Communal Bond

Courage and Command Tests taken by the model's unit are Minimised, and may use the Discipline from other units within 8", following the rules below:

1. Choose a single model in the unit to take the test for the whole unit, as usual.
2. Determine the model with the highest Discipline value in any other friendly, non-Shaken unit within 8".
3. Set the Discipline value of the model chosen in step 1 above to the value determined in step 2.

Druidism

Evocation

Shamanism

Though they lack formal education and can rarely match the skill of the anurarchs, saurians encourage magical practice, seeing spellcasting as a Vitalist virtue. As a result, there are many junior mages within saurian society, and they rarely take on specialised roles like the wizards of other cultures. Enclave wizards are equally common among the finest warriors as among volunteer recruits.

The spells are gained starting from the first spell of the Path, progressing towards the last spell of the Path.
This does not change the bearer's chosen Magic Path.
Note: by doing so, it is possible that a single Wizard gain the same spell twice – yet they still won't be able to cast that same spell multiple times (for example, a Death Cult Hierarch with Wizard Adept and Soul Conduit that selected spells #1 and #3 from Divination and swapped to Duty is Eternal during Battle Setup selects Evocation with Scroll of the Free Mind: they now know Whispers of the Veil twice, as well as Danse Macabre, and Duty is Eternal).

Scroll of Power 20 pts
Wizards only.
One use only. Duration: Instant.
Can be used immediately after a seeing the result of a Casting Roll 'Roll Dice' (5.A Casting Spells, 3) of a Learned Spell by the bearer.
The bearer may add one additional free Magic Dice to this Casting Roll.
The limit of five Magic Dice still applies.
Note: The usage of a Power Scroll can change a Casting Roll to a Miscast.

Hereditary Spell

The primitive emotional link that saurians share is biological in nature and can connect individuals over long distances. But from their belief in a greater moral calculation that unites all of creation, they have also developed magical means to bring themselves closer to true collaboration at a deep spiritual level. Though they work only at short range, such spells can create potent feedback loops that miraculously empower those working together.

Able to acquire and process information at astonishing rates, anurachs can achieve unsurpassed skill in wizardry, making them both valuable and dangerous. To make use of their great power and unique areas of expertise, anurarchs are allowed to participate in battle, but they're strictly guarded at all times. Some are talented telepaths, a form of magic undiscovered by most species.

Many caimans are contradictory by nature, exploring meditative pastimes while simultaneously developing a military ferocity for times of war. Those who have acquired a true mastery of combat are greatly to be feared – not only are they powerful in their own right, but they also learn the art of working alongside untrained warriors to augment their effectiveness in battle.

Saurians have no standing military or trained warriors, but certain individuals sometimes demonstrate an outstanding knack for war. These outliers selflessly shoulder the burden of military organisation, strategy and frontline assignments, though they have no formal authority. Volunteering for any warparty, their experience makes them tremendously dangerous in the fray.

Character Mounts

Even if an anurach's extraordinary magecraft can help achieve Vitalist goals, many saurians fear they may hatch nefarious schemes if left unattended. In both peace and war, anurachs are always under "protection" by dedicated and heavily armed guards, who surround the lodestone platforms the archmages use for transportation, keeping a barrier between them and the outside world.

Equally untaught, skinks are the tegus' equals in saurian society, but on the battlefield they intuitively find their own niche, putting their greater speed and agility to good use. Able to use simple weapons to great effect, they provide a potent counterpoint to their larger sisters and pets.

Saurians are carnivores; while most food comes from domesticated flocks, this is often supplemented by hunting, especially while on campaign. Better able to quietly stalk prey, skinks are often superb hunters, and those who have developed these skills often use them to protect their enclaves and assist their armies by harassing enemies with death-dealing projectiles.

Selected for watchfulness and skill, these saurians are permanent guards – or perhaps jailors – for an enclave's anurarchs. Most saurians have little interest in arms or armour, but these tegu use hefty clubs inspired by Aotarakoan humans, as well as bones, gold, and other materials for rudimentary protection, laced with magic-absorbing obsidian to negate the spells of any anurarch that might turn against them.

Fast, ferocious, scythe clawed, and intelligent enough to coordinate attacks, raptors are the ultimate pack hunting predators.
