Vampire Covenant

Since humankind first stepped into the sun, it has suffered a particularly sinister shadow. Immortal, blood-drinking monsters able to make themselves appear like ordinary people, vampires hide in the very heart of society, undead infiltrators and puppet masters, using charm and cunning to orchestrate the affairs of their unwitting minions and secure their own secret mastery. Called the Lords of Night, they're not just manipulators but conspirators, for they have made a great pact to protect the secrecy of their unholy worldwide enterprise. Most terrifying of all are the moments when this Covenant reveals itself in its full glory, raising vast necromantic hosts of the living dead to wage grisly wars upon the world.

The strongholds of the Covenant's power can be found wherever humans live, but only very rarely is this power revealed.

The most successful vampires can found entire lineages, and their bloodlines share in their vampiric traits. The origin points of the current major lines are believed to be known, though the truth is never certain when it comes to vampires. I. Strigoi II. Sangreal III. Lamia IV. Vetala

Vampires

The Lords of Night are aptly named, for the sun's touch pains them. Vampires are a unique form of undead being whose soul has been deeply bonded to their physical body, making them immortal, fast-healing and almost impossible to destroy. Suffering from an eternal Thirst, they require blood for sustenance and to further speed their regenerative powers, granting them great strength and magical skill. Often they develop stranger talents, from hypnosis to the ability to take on animal attributes or even shapeshift completely. Night Lords reject the natural passing of souls into the care of the gods; they are anathema to all religions, and holy orders are often their greatest enemies. Religious spaces, symbols and objects can be used against them, among other weaknesses like mirrors showing their true nature and the compulsion to adhere to strict personal codes.

The Covenant

The majority of the world's vampires are members of a vast secret society simply called the Covenant: an ancient pact intended to allow the Lords of Night to operate without detection. With lodges across the world, which appear to outsiders as honest businesses or institutions, the Covenant attracts many thralls who hope to ascend to vampirism themselves, as well as those who do not even realise their masters' true nature.

Bloodlines

Almost all vampires are sired by others of their kind, connected by blood and bite all the way back to one individual. Those truly rare radicals are able to attain the Thirst by conducting particularly powerful and transgressive rituals. Such events mark the creation of a new bloodline: a vampiric family that follows the traits and methods of its progenitor. All bloodlines participate in the Covenant, often working side by side within the same lodges, but they never abandon their unique natures, codes of behaviour, and the "blood powers" that come with their inheritance. Four bloodlines dominate the Covenant today:

- Strigoi, the Nightmares. The first and oldest bloodline, created in Taphria in the Dawn Age, Stigoi are monsters in the night and humanity's fear of the dark. Unlike other vampires, they do not use glamour to project fair-seeming forms, but revel in their bestial strength.
- Sangreal, the Warriors. Obsessed with martial prowess, these vampires are a twisted reflection of knightly chivalry, inherited from Gilles de Raux, the founder and Black King of Equitaine.
- Lamia, the Spiders. Using looks and charm to beguile, Lamians are the masters of hypnosis and manipulation. Founded by Evadne of Myra, who sought to subjugate the Avrasi empire of antiquity.

- Vetala, the Rulers. Valuing nobility and lineage, many Vetala branches seek dominion over mortal lands, cloaking themselves in the trappings of aristocracy. Said to have been founded by the hundred sons of the Sagarikan mystic Rishalu.

Finally, there are those rare few who, attempting the ritual but failing to attain the Thirst, instead find a different form of immortality, with their soul ever bound to a ritual object. Called liches, they're unable to pass on their curse, and have no bloodline. Their corpses wither and decay, but they can achieve great feats of necromancy and are powerful members of the Covenant.

Necromancy

The magic of death is not unique to vampires, but they are among its greatest practitioners. This art allows them to bind souls into corpses, raising them to a second life, their will enslaved to that of the necromancer. Any soul can be used for this purpose, even lesser souls culled from animals, producing bestial instincts. Vampires collect and even trade souls, storing them for a future time when such undead constructs are required. In this way, they're often capable of raising huge armies with incredible speed: an enormously powerful ability, only used in dire moments or for the completion of great projects, since doing so reveals the vampire's existence. This strength is also a weakness: such hosts may be mighty, but they rely heavily on a central animating force. If the necromancer is slain, the minions it controls will soon become unbound, most returning to lifeless cadavers.

The Undead

Different kinds of necromancy have resulted in many forms of undead creatures. The majority are mindless: decaying corpses with weak or simple souls, which continue to move and think at a rudimentary level, following basic instincts and often seeking to devour the living. If animal souls are used, they can exhibit some behaviours of the animal, but stronger instincts often take precedence. In other cases, animal corpses are used, as well as large creatures like trolls and ogres, making for particularly powerful beasts. Certain specialised undead are more conscious, able to think and practise more advanced behaviours, like guarding a site or operating a mechanism. Then there are the disembodied undead, created when a soul fails to cross the Veil and remains in the Mortal Realm. Sometimes these souls are able to interact with or haunt the material world, normally driven by unfinished business, leading to all manner of ghosts and poltergeists that can be caught and controlled by necromancers.

Army Model Rules

Ashes to Ashes

At the end of each of your Player Turns, if there are no friendly models with Gates of the Netherworld on the Battlefield, each unit containing Ashes to Ashes loses X HP, where 'X' is equal to half the Resurrected, value fractions are rounded up, (roll any dice when needed).

These hits can only be allocated onto models with Ashes to Ashes.

Autonomous

Units entirely with Autonomous may perform March Moves as normal despite being Undead, even when outside the range of Commanding Presence of any friendly models.

Awaken (X)

The model can Raise Health Points above a unit's starting size for the units stated within brackets ('X'). However, units cannot be increased beyond twice their starting size or beyond the unmodified maximum unit size (that is printed in their unit entry). A unit's starting size is the size of the unit as written on the Army List or the size of the unit when it is Summoned.

Gates of the Netherworld

Uncommon. Must include at least 1.

- If the model has chosen Evocation as its Path of Magic: whenever the model successfully casts the Hereditary Spell, all targets of the spell are considered to have +1 Rsr.
- If the model has chosen a different path than Evocation as its Path of Magic: the model knows the Apprentice Spell (#1) in Evocation in addition to its other spells.

Ghostly Form

The model gains Aegis (3+, against non-Magical Attacks) and Aegis (5+).

Meeting of Minds

The model gains Necromantic Aura.

Necromantic Aura

All friendly units within 6" of one or more models with Necromantic Aura reduce the number of HP losses caused by Ashes to Ashes and Unstable by 1.

The Dead Arise

Rarity: Legendary.

The model can cast The Dead Arise as a Bound Spell (5+).

The Dead Arise: Range: 12", Type: Ground, Duration: Instant.

Summon a Skeletons or Zombies unit. Declare which when selecting the target. The unit has a number of Health Points corresponding to its Rsr. All upgrades except Command Group Options are allowed. Note: all models must be placed within the spell's Range, with at least one model touching the target point.

Attack Attributes

Unholy Appetite – Melee

After a Round of Combat in which at least one attack with Unholy Appetite caused any HP loss, all attacks from the same unit with Unholy Appetite gain Hatred until the end of the next Player Turn.

Vampiric (X+) – Melee

At the end of each Melee Phase, check and resolve the following effects for all models with Vampiric:

- Character (or Attachable Model): if at least one attack with Vampiric made by the Character (or Attachable Model) caused any HP loss against enemy units, the model with Vampiric can make a single Vampiric roll. If successful, the model Recovers a single HP.
- Rank-and-File model: if at least one attack with Vampiric made by a Rank-and-File model in the unit caused any HP loss against enemy units, the unit can make a single Vampiric roll. If successful, the units Rank-and-File Health Pool Raises a single HP.

A Vampiric roll is successful if the D6 scores X+, where 'X' is the number stated within brackets. If a unit or Character has multiple model parts with this Attack Attribute that each caused a HP loss, use the best value.

Blood Powers

All vampires attain bodily enhancements, becoming much stronger and swifter than their mortal personas. But additional, unique powers are common too – many of these are linked to the bloodline passed down from a vampire's sire, but others can be developed through training, typically reflecting the dark nature of the vampire's soul.

Vampire Counts and Vampire Courtiers must purchase unique model rules called 'Blood Powers'.

Ancestral Blood Powers

(Max. 1 Ancestral Blood Power /model)

Strigoi 60 pts
Models on Shrieking Horror, or without Mount. Models without Shield or Wizard Master only.

The bearer's Armour is set to 0, its HP are set to 4, it gains First Strike (Hatred) and loses Metal Armour. Additionally, if it is without Mount, it gains Regeneration (4+).

Lahmia 40 pts
Models without Shield only.

The bearer's Armour is set to 1, it gains Elven Finesse and loses Metal Armour. Additionally, if the model is of Height 1–2, it gains Distracting (1).

Blood Magic 60 pts
The bearer cannot know the Hereditary Spell, or have it as a Bound Spell, in any way.
Each time the bearer successfully casts a Learned Spell, you may discard one Magic Dice to successfully cast Arise!, targeting only the bearer's unit.

Eternal Duellist 60 pts
The bearer's Melee Attacks ignore Parry, and must re-roll to-hit and to-wound rolls of '1'.

Ghoul Lord 60 pts
Legendary. Vampire Counts with Strigoi only.
The bearer and all Rank-and-File models in the bearer's unit gain Poison Attacks.

Monster Hunter 50 pts
The bearer gains Multiple Wounds (2, towards Height 4–5).

Arcane Knowledge 40 pts
Legendary. Wizards only.
The bearer selects a second Path of Magic: it knows one spell from this Path, in addition to its other spells, selected from the Apprentice Spell or Adept Spells (#1–#4), and is otherwise not allowed to choose spells from this Path. Ignore this Path for the purpose of Gates of the Netherworld.

Crimson Rage 40 pts
Legendary. Vampire Counts with Sangreal only.
The bearer gains Hatred, and its Vampiric rolls gain Maximised.

Storm Caller 40 pts
Legendary. Vampire Counts with Vetala only.
All units within 12" of the bearer's model benefit from Hard Target (1).

Bestial Bulk 35 pts
without Mount only.
The model's Height is changed to 3, its base size is changed to 40×40 mm, it gains Unholy Appetite, and +1 Res.

Flying Horror 30 pts
without Mount only.
The model gains +2" Cha, +2" Mob, Fly and Swiftstride.

Unbreakable Will 30 pts
During Combat Choices, select a single friendly unit Engaged in the same Combat as the bearer (this can be its own unit): this unit gains Stubborn. Duration: End of Turn.

Mesmerising Gaze 20 pts
The bearer gains Afflict (–1 Att, –1 Off).
Only Character models are affected by this instance of Afflict.

Mysteries of the Night 20 pts
Wizard Apprentice or Wizard Adept only.
The bearer's Path access is replaced with Shamanism and Witchcraft.

Magic Resistance (2).

Hereditary Spell

One of the gifts of the Thirst is an extraordinary affinity for death magic, making vampires natural necromancers from the moment they are sired. Fuelled by stored souls, a Lord of Night can turn any nearby corpse into a grasping vessel, continuously raising it back to undeath, and adding fresh victims to their ranks.

A dark mirror of human nobility, "Count" is the best known among the highest ranks of the Covenant. Having conquered death itself, these ancient vampires seek mastery over the living and the dead. In addition to their already formidable abilities, many have amassed significant temporal power over mortal realms, hiding in plain sight to further their goals.

In ages past, great warrior-kings were interred beneath grim tombs across the world. In a cruel twist of fate, these crowned heads are now slaves to the whims of the necromancer who raised them from their sleep. Yet their old self still resides within them, remembering old glories and long-forgotten battles, and they retain greater self-direction than most.

The pinnacle of necromantic ambition is the resurrection of a dragon. Even finding the body of such a mighty creature is incredibly unlikely, for they rarely die, and usually far from prying eyes. They must then be bound with sufficiently formidable souls: no easy task. But the reward for success is the complete control of the world's greatest predator.
